Camping at Home

Just because you're stuck at home doesn't mean you can't experience the fun of camping. Pop up your tent or roll your swag out in the back yard and enjoy the beautiful night sky. Don't have a tent? No problem—make a temporary shelter by throwing an old sheet or two over your trampoline, or by surrounding your clothesline with blankets (just make sure you get Mum's permission first before you raid her linen cupboard). Of course you don't have to go outdoors to go camping. Get inventive and build a makeshift tent inside instead, then switch off all the lights to create the perfect camping atmosphere. And of course no camping trip is complete without treats and a spooky story!
